

National Energy Marketers Association Hosts Mid-Atlantic Energy Policy Summit

State and Regional PJM Officials Address Impacts of Vortex Price Spikes of 2014 Electricity and Natural Gas Prices, Reliability and Volatility at Issue

October 20, 2014 01:52 PM Eastern Daylight Time

WASHINGTON--(BUSINESS WIRE)--The National Energy Marketers Association (NEM) convenes its inaugural Mid-Atlantic Energy Policy Summit at The Center Club in Baltimore, Maryland on October 22-23, 2014. The policies to be discussed will affect all consumers and businesses within the Mid-Atlantic Region.

"NEM is very pleased that leading experts, regulators, legislators, PJM officials, wholesales, retailers and major consumers will debate the potential impacts that new market rules may have on the volatility, reliability and prices for natural gas and electricity going forward"

"The industry has had many months to analyze the polar vortex and its unanticipated impacts on consumers, energy prices, volatility and reliability during the winter of 2014," said Craig Goodman, President of NEM. "NEM is very pleased that leading experts, regulators, legislators, PJM officials, wholesales, retailers and major consumers will debate the potential impacts that new market rules may have on the volatility, reliability and prices for natural gas and electricity going forward." said Goodman, a former, high ranking energy policy official for three past Presidential Administrations.
